Handmade vs Digital Dentures: Does It Matter?

If you've been looking into dentures in Collier Row, you'll have seen the word "digital" a lot. Scans, printed teeth and machine-made bases all sound modern and efficient.

But a denture isn't a gadget. It sits in your mouth all day, and it has to fit your gums, your bite and your face. At Romford Denture Clinic, every denture is made by hand, from start to finish, by one person: Scott Potter, with over 40 years of experience at the bench.

What's the difference?

Digital dentures are designed on a screen and made largely by machine. They can be quick, but the fit depends on the scan and the software.

Handmade dentures are built up in stages around a real impression of your mouth. Each stage is checked, adjusted and tried in before the denture is finished. Small changes are made by eye and by hand, the way they have been for generations.

Neither approach is magic. But we believe an experienced pair of hands makes the difference between a denture you tolerate and one you forget you're wearing.

Why choose handmade?

- One person, start to finish. No handovers, no production line. The person who takes your impression is the person who makes your denture.
- Try-in stages. You see and feel the denture in wax before it's finished, so changes are easy.
- Natural look. Teeth are set by hand to suit your face, your smile and your age.
- Comfort first. Adjustments are made carefully until it feels right.
- 40 years of experience. Thousands of dentures, and every lesson learned from them.
